NORTHVIEW'S DEVOTIONAL

Trusting His Perspective by Sharon Reidenbach

[These facts are true: the delivery is fiction.]

The Principal shook his head. The backlash from this mandate would erupt quickly. As expected, the representatives arrived.

"Sir," they began, "We know there's a mistake with this document."

"No mistake. It's plain and simple."

"You mean our students can no longer advertise their Bible studies and prayer-times, or meet?" asked the spokesperson.

The principal stood. "I appreciate your concerns. At the moment, you'll have to trust me, by faith, this is the right thing. I deeply respect your thoughts, and thank you for coming."

Leaving, they muttered, "We're not finished, yet."

Sitting down, with hands clasped, he prayed, "Lord, grant me strength and wisdom to see this through to give You glory."

The uproar continued. He asked the group back. "Ladies and gentlemen, you continue to miss the point."

"We sure do," someone interrupted.

"Yes, well," said the administrator. "For 30 days, the district will allow you to walk in my shoes to deal with this delicate situation. Then we'll meet again."

Stunned by the unexpected news, smiles, nods and handshakes of appreciation, abounded.

"Oh, by the way, the petitions will now go through you," called out the principal.

"What petitions?" The office door closed.

"They're here sir," said the secretary.

"Thanks, show them in."

A somber group filled the room. "Ah, Mr. _____, this didn't quite turn out like we imagined. We thought we were home free, helping our kids. But then those petitions you spoke of flooded in."

"What happened?" asked the principal.

"Everything fell apart," replied the leader. "So-called religious groups we'd never heard of and others we knew were dangerous, applied for rooms and the means to advertise."

The administrator felt sorry for them for he knew what they'd endured. "Why don't you help the students think creatively?" asked the Principal. "What does the mandate not say?"

"Well," a soft voice replied. "It doesn't say they can't meet before or after school. Nor does it keep them from verbally spreading the information."

"Right. Now, have faith in your administration and pray for us. Our goal is to do what's best for students. Inadvertently, this new ruling will protect your children from outside destructive influences."

After Christ told His followers to give unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, He didn't fight the system, but creatively shared the greatest message the world ever heard.

And we're encouraged to do the same, through faith, to learn how to turn a negative into a positive opportunity, remembering, "For My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways My ways." (Isaiah 55:8, NKJV)

Then when challenged we're to, "Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer - let your requests be known to God." (Philippians 4:6) because, He'll never give a harmful mandate, but love, and protect us.
